E. Other Information

E.1 Combining Marks

COMBINING ALMOST EQUAL TO BELOW: Phonetic diacritic for strident (epiglottal trill) vowels (see Figure 1). This character is used phonetically in describing Khoisan languages such as !Xóõ.

COMBINING ALMOST EQUAL TO BELOW could possibly be considered COMBINING TILDE BELOW + COMBINING TILDE BELOW. However, COMBINING ALMOST EQUAL TO BELOW is one character representing strident vowels. It does not represent creaky voiced which is what tilde below represents in the IPA. COMBINING ALMOST EQUAL TO ABOVE exists in Unicode and we believe the COMBINING ALMOST EQUAL TO BELOW should be added for linguistic usage as well.

Traill (1985, 1986) has provided a great deal of valuable data on these vowels. Figure 9.26 shows, in addition to the plain and pharyngealized vowels discussed above, the strident vowels which, for want of better symbols, we will represent by a and u. Traill, in accordance with his phonological analysis, transcribes them as ah and uh. It is clear that the whole body of the tongue is much lower for the strident vowels. In addition the back wall of the pharynx, which is shown by the dashed line, is drawn forward, and, "the epiglottis vibrates rapidly during these sounds" (Trail 1985).

E.2 Latin Extended

LATIN CAPITAL LETTER SMALL TURNED ALPHA is a phonetic symbol in the Americanist tradition for a voiceless, low open back rounded vowel (see Figure 2). Smalley (1989, page 392) says "Voiceless vowels are indicated by capital letters on the analogy of voiceless nasals and laterals."

Although Pike (1947) and Floyd (1981) do not illustrate the use of this symbol, both make general reference to the use of capital letters for transcribing voiceless vocoids:

"Voiceless vocoids may be written with capital letters, or letters extra-large in size, such as 'A' and 'O'." (Pike 1947, p. 5)

"Symbolization: VI. vocoids are symbolized by capital letters: [A I O E ...] or by large letters: [I Æ O ...]." (Floyd 1981, p. 37).

This character is used in teaching Americanist linguistics and should be added for linguistic usage.

LATIN CAPITAL LETTER S WITH SWASH TAIL and LATIN CAPITAL LETTER Z WITH SWASH TAIL: The lowercase versions of these characters are used in phonetic transcription for labialized alveolar fricatives. They are not IPA-approved, but attested in Africanist literature. The lowercase versions were added to Unicode 4.1 (see L2/03-180R).

Both uppercase and lowercase characters were historically used in the Shona (ISO 639-3:SNA) orthography from 1932 to 1955 (see Figures 3-6). The Shona number between 10-11 million in Zimbabwe and spread to Botswana and Zambia. Though Shona has a modified orthography which no longer uses these characters (the current orthography uses "sv" and "zv"), we believe these characters should be encoded in order to represent historical documents. "Books in this 1932 spelling are widely current and will continue to be so for some time..." (Fortune, 1957. p. xiv.). Note that the Shona Bible example was originally printed in 1949 with a 1999 reprint, so although this orthography is no longer officially in use, books are still available using this orthography.

and prepalatal fricatives. The various types of orthography are discussed at the commencement of each chapter V-IX. In contradistinction to the use of diacritics, according to the Lepsius system, Shona uses several phonetic symbols of the system as advocated by the International Phonetic Association, viz. δ , d, δ , v, v. These are not all I.P.A. symbols, but have been devised on the principle of 'one sound one symbol'.
