

Draft IVD registration for CJK Compatibility characters

Eric Muller, Adobe Systems

August 7, 2009

[118-A91] Action Item for Eric Muller: Produce a draft registration proposal for an IVD collection for existing compatibility CJK characters.

§1 It is assumed that the reader is familiar with document L2/08-373, Handling CJK compatibility characters with variation sequences and to a lesser extent with L2/09-080, Handling Glyph Shapes for Government Use in WG2/N3530 via Variation Sequences

§2 This document is a preliminary draft/working document for a registration. The purpose of presenting it to the UTC at this early stage is to gather feedback about the approach taken.

§3 The approach taken here is the second approach described in L2/08-373, namely to take into account the glyph shapes when building the IVSes.

The general procedure is to consider together a unified ideograph and all its canonically equivalent compatibility ideographs. For each such group, all the glyphs shapes (as provided in the 10646 CD, document SC2 N 4070) are examined, and one variation sequence is proposed for each unique glyph shape. Of course, "glyph shape" is to be understood in a somewhat abstract sense, so that weight differences or typeface-specific differences are abstracted away.

Because of this glyph shape approach, compatibility ideographs which have been encoded for a purpose other than capturing graphic differences (in particular the pronunciation variants from KS X 1001:1998) are not handled in this proposal. For each glyph group, if all the compatibility ideographs are of that nature, then the group is essentially ignored, even if the representative glyphs for the unified ideographs show graphic variations (e.g. the G and J glyphs of the unified ideograph are different). In the details below, those groups are indicated by "!! kp0".

Also because of the glyph shape approach, and because of the lack of glyph shapes for the KP sources, the compatibility ideographs with only a KP source have also been ignored. There is simply no way to make a graphic evaluation of the invisible! Unlike the previous situation, those cases could be handled as soon as representative glyphs for the KP sources are available.

§6 Caveat: the representative glyph shapes in CD have been taken as authoritative. This is probably true to a very large extent for the unified ideographs, as the CD uses brand new fonts provided by the IRG (modulo bugs which have not been identified yet). However, this is probably far less true for the compatibility ideographs: the CD still uses a font that has been cobbled together over time, mostly outside the IRG, and that font may very well be out of sync with new fonts for the unified ideographs. In fact, there are a number of cases where a compatibility ideograph has been encoded ostensibly for the purpose of expressing a graphic distinction with the representative shape of the unified ideograph, yet there is currently no shape difference between the relevant representative glyphs. For example, the compatibility ideograph U+2F916 has the single source T7-5360, and its canonical equivalent U+3D96 has a T4 source; yet the T glyph shape for U+3D96 and the (single) glyph shape for U+2F916 are apparently identical. It is unknown whether this is a problem which has always existed or whether this is a problem that has been introduced by the new fonts for unified ideograph (or the lack of new fonts for compatibility ideographs).

§7 The bulk of this document is the treatment of each group (unified ideographs, its compatibility ideographs). Each group looks like this:

We have the representative glyphs from the 10646 CD, followed by the sources, followed by the proposed IVSes. The later use a short hand notation, which expands in this case to: the proposal is to register two sequences: <349E, VS17>, and <349E, VS18>. The first is for the glyph shape used for the kx and t3 sources, and the second for the glyph shape used for the tf source.

I also looked at the current IVD to make this a possible extension of AJ1. When we already have a variation sequence, I used a @ instead of + (e.g. "17@"). This has been done without prejudging of whether the sequences should augment the AJ1 collection or whether we should have a new collection. To obtain a proposal for a new independent collection, it is simply a matter of using other VSes for those entries with an @. This way of doing thing just allows us to postpone the decision pretty much to the last minute. On the other hand, ignoring initially AJ1 and having to reconcile with it later (if at least to not reuse the same sequences) would have been more work.

In the SIP, we have many cases of a unified ideograph with a G source and a T source (identical shape) and a compatibility for a T source. In the proposed sequences, I don't list the T shape that's identical to the G shape.

§8 Not surprisingly, most of the shape differences derive from differences in a small number of components, and furthermore each component has itself a small number of different shapes. For example, the Walk radical has a few shapes:

and we find those variations in a number of cases, e.g. U+9038, U+9072, U+907C, U+908F. It seems that one could almost provide a textual description of variations sequences, much like we have textual descriptions for the math variation sequences (with serif/without serif): they would be "with the two dot version of the walk radical" / "with the one dot version of the walk radical" / Furthermore, one could imagine to leverage IDSes of the characters, by relying on IVSes of the components. E.g. if an IDS for U+908F 邆 is <□, U+2FA1 走 KANGXI RADICAL WALK, ...> then we can describe IVSes for U+908F as IDSes involving the IVSes of the components:

<鄙, VS17> = cid+6930 = <□, 走 VSx, ...>

where 走 VSx is the two dot version of the radical and 走 VSy is the one dot version. In math terms, you can think of this as a distribution of the VS operation over the IDS operation.

Let's call the variations on the components the generator set because most (if not all) the other variations can be generated from them. What's interesting about this generator set is that it captures relatively concisely the essence of a collection, and can be used to document the intent and scope of the collection (Of course, there will be some sequences in the collection that cannot be explained solely from the generator set.) Before anybody gets too nervous, I am not suggesting that such a generator set should be part of the description of a collection, nor that this point of view should be completely formalized (and certainly not that collections should be generated mechanically from a generator sets and IDS for the whole repertoire!). Rather, describing informally the generator set would probably help the users of a collection, much like Annex S helps the users of Unicode.

Even without exposing this generator set in the documentation of a collection, it could be a useful tool to build the collection, and ensure a minimum of integrity in the collection. I have not used this tool here (I really understood it after have done most of the case "by hand"), but I do plan to try it.

§9 A closely related observation is that the generator set seems to be about the same for 1) the existing AJ1 collection, 2) the collection one could form for the compatibility ideographs for government use recently proposed by Japan, and 3) the collection presented here (taking into account that the first two are specific to Japan, while the last is pan-CJK). Furthermore, the generator set is very similar to the set of unifiable differences listed in section S.1.5 of Annex S. Of course, this is far from a complete accident and can be explained by the fact that those four scenarios revolve more or less around the same usage scenario: large groups of modern users (by opposition to, say, academic/historic users, or small groups).

As a consequence, I strongly believe (and this is a personal opinion) that there should be a single collection for all three scenarios. If we instead have three separate collections, there will be significant overlap between them, and it will be a nightmare for users (I get this document from some Japanese government office, so it uses the Japanese government collection, and I want to realize it with a font that has been built around the AJ1 collection - I need to apply the translation between them, no fun). To give an order of magnitude, I estimate that there are 1,300 sequences in this proposal, and that 500 of those exist in AJ1.

§10 Complaint #1. In order to perform this work, it is necessary to look simultaneously at glyphs on different pages of the standard (one for the unified block, and one for each compatibility character - at least one, sometimes two or three), as well as at the content of the IVD. The paper shuffling is just impossible, even with virtual paper. Because fonts are not available (even just for this standardization work), I had to do about 2,000 screen captures to have something I could work with. In this day and age, this is simply madness, no to mention error-prone.

Complaint #2. It is a real pity that the 10646 CD does not include multi-column charts for the compatibility ideographs, made with fonts provided by the IRG (and presumably checked against the new fonts for the unified ideographs).

§11 With all this in mind, here are the promised sequences. Enjoy!
