1. Proposal. The Combining Up Tack Above is a phonetic character found in American works around 1900. It was used by at least two companies (Ginn & Company and Rand McNally) for a variety of authors for original publications over at least a ten year period (1894-1904) and for reprints until at least 1928, and was also used for the 1901 Webster's International Dictionary, which was the justification used by Rand McNally for using it.

Distributed Proofreaders, which is transcribing books for Project Gutenberg, is finding this character to be not infrequent in texts they are transcribing, and find a need to represent it in Unicode. It should have identical character properties to U+0300. It should be kept in the BMP with other combining characters for Latin text.

One character is proposed here for addition to the UCS.

All other unmarked consonants have their usual English sounds.
Silent letters are italicized.

Vowels when obscured and turned toward the neutral sound are marked thus, ạ, ẹ, etc.

In the terminations as, on, and some others, words familiar in English have the vowels marked obscure; less familiar words have the vowels marked short: Æneạs, Amyclăs; Jasọn, Typhŏn, etc.

The termination eus from Greek nouns of the third declension in ευς is treated as one syllable, though its resolution into two syllables is admissible on good authority: Brī′ạ reūs or Brĭ ā′rė ŭs, Or′pheūs or Or′phė ŭs, etc.
