The ad-hoc began by addressing some misunderstandings with regard to the repertoire of 1188 Naxi Dongba characters proposed by the experts from China (N4043) and the four new documents provided by experts from Ireland and the UK. The latter documents were intended to make more easily available the catalogues of Naxi Dongba (N4877, N4878) and Naxi Geba characters (N4886, N4887) in order to facilitate the study of the source materials for the script.

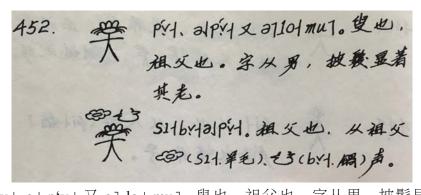

Chinese experts explained the nature of the modern use of both Naxi Dongba and Naxi Geba. Naxi Geba appears in only a very few relatively recent manuscripts and shows a certain lack of standardization. While some manuscripts give both Dongba and Geba characters side by side, and while study of these manuscripts may be useful for future scholars, the primary concern of the modern user community is to use Naxi Dongba in a linear, practical fashion to represent the language.

A replacement document for N4043 was made available to experts at the meeting. This has been published as N4898 (L2/17-339). It presents essentially the same repertoire of characters found in N4043, but with additional columns including a UCS character name, an IPA transcription, and both English and Chinese meanings for the characters. (These columns were requested by Deborah Anderson (Script Encoding Initiative, UC Berkeley) in N4641 (L2/14-245).)

The ad-hoc determined that N4898 was a stable basis for a repertoire which could be ballotted. The ad-hoc also made a number of determinations regarding the expected evaluation of the characters when they are on the ballot. It is expected that a number of changes will be made, but because the repertoire has been stable for a long time, and the changes will largely be in terms of ordering, the ad-hoc makes the following recommendations:

- The ad-hoc is satisfied with the repertoire of 1188 characters because it is the repertoire required for modern use and has been stable for a long time. Typographic representation of traditional layout is not a priority though it may be of historical interest.
- The ad-hoc recommends that SC2 ballot the 1188 characters. We have appended the code chart below.
- The ad-hoc recommends that the repertoire be reordered during ballot comments according to the type of classification used in the source dictionaries. This will involve offline consensus of interested parties during the ballot process, but it is well-known that nothing focusses the mind

- like a formal vote. If during the reordering process, additional characters should be discovered, they also can be added during the ballot process. (This is the normal SC2 procedure.)
- The ad-hoc requests the Naxi experts to provide an explanation of how some characters can combine. This appears to be most similar to an Egyptian Hieroglyphic type of combination; this would not present architectural issues. Here is an example from Fang Guoyu's dictionary:

452. p'y+, ə√ p'y+ 又 ə¬ lo+ mu¬. 叟也,祖父也。字从男,披髮显著其老。 p'y+, ə√ p'y+ or ə¬ lo+ mu¬. "Old man, ancestor". The character is derived from "man" with long hair indicating his old age.

sn+by+əlp'y+祖父也,从祖父(sn+羊毛),(by+锅)声。 sn+by+əlp'y+ "ancestor", derived from "ancestor" with sn+ "wool" and by+ "cooking pot" as phonetics.

• The ad-hoc recommends that Naxi Geba should be left for further study as a separate script as it is not relevant to the modern use of Naxi Dongba.
