€ COPTIC LETTER EIE
E. Other Information

This character is used by some New Testament scholars as a textual apparatus symbol denoting a family of Egyptian manuscripts of portions of the Greek New Testament. The use of this symbol is illustrated here:

INTRODUCTION

Where a consensus of the manuscripts representing the Egyptian texts exists, they are cited corporately under the siglum Coptic $\text{ её}$. But the composition of $\text{ её}$ varies from book to book and can be learned from the information given just before the first apparatus on the initial page of each book. If a regularly cited manuscript reflects the Egyptian texts, but is extremely fragmentary, it is normally excluded from $\text{ её}$ in the book in question. To do otherwise would have necessitated calling attention to its hiatus repeatedly. But if not included in $\text{ ещё}$, the reader can assume that its nonappearance in the apparatus indicates its testimony was not available.

A summary of the value of $\text{ ещё}$ is:

Matthew, Mark $\text{ РBC}$
Luke $\text{ p}^72\text{ РBC}$
John $\text{ p}^66 \text{ РBC}$
Acts $\text{ p}^65\text{ РBAC}$
Romans through 1 Thessalonians $\text{ РBAC}$
2 Thessalonians $\text{ РBAC}$
1 Timothy through Philemon $\text{ РAC}$
Hebrews $\text{ p}^66\text{ РBAC}$
James $\text{ РBAC}$
1, 2 Peter $\text{ p}^72\text{ РBAC}$
1 John $\text{ РBAC}$
2 John $\text{ РBAC}$
3 John $\text{ РBAC}$
Jude $\text{ p}^72\text{ РBAC}$
Revelation $\text{ РAC}$

In those books where $\text{ ещё}$ represents just three manuscripts, this siglum is only used when all three agree. Where $\text{ ещё}$ has four representatives, it is used where at least three agree. The reading of the other member is then given separately or cited in parentheses with a preceding $\text{ ещё}$ (hiatus). Where there are five representatives of $\text{ ещё}$, the siglum is only cited if four agree. The reading of the other witness is either given or a hiatus is indicated. If the reading of a manuscript at any point cannot be determined
