Title: Position Paper on Egyptological Yod and Cyrillic Breathings (N3382R)

Source: USNB and L2

Status: Member Body Contribution

Date: 2008-04-08

The US National Body and L2 strongly back the viewpoint stated in document N3431 (L2/08-087) by Deborah Anderson and Donald Mastronarde.

There is no uniform consensus amongst the user community that U+0486 COMBINING CYRILLIC PSILI PNEUMATA is the correct character to use for Egyptological yod. As a result, there is no reason to add the annotation spelling out the use of U+0486 for Egyptological yod nor to change the script property to "Script=Inherited."

The UTC welcomes further feedback on this issue, which formally falls outside the discussion of character repertoire, name, glyph, or encoding architecture.
