Proposal:

Bengali language includes the following two punctuation characters:

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Sl.</th>
<th>Name of the Character</th>
<th>Visual Form</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>1</td>
<td>DARHI</td>
<td>।</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>2</td>
<td>DOUBLE DARHI</td>
<td>।।</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

Both of the punctuation characters are used to indicate the end of a sentence. Among them DARHI is the most commonly used punctuation character at present. The DOUBLE DARHI is also used. However, its use is mostly seen in the traditional literatures of Bangladesh, such as Punthi, poems, songs, etc.

These two characters are missing from the Bengali block of Unicode standard. Hence, ICT Division would like to propose for inclusion of those two characters in the Bengali Block of UCS.

Rationale:

Bangladesh is the only country whose national language is Bengali. The people of Bangladesh fought for Bengali to establish it as their mother language in 1952. That was the solitary instance of fighting for a language in the history of mankind. That struggle for language also led to the independence of Bangladesh in 1971.

Currently 160 million people of Bangladesh use Bengali as their mother language. Apart from that people of West Bengal, Asam and some other parts of India speak Bengali and use the same scripts.

In all forms of written communications in Bangladesh, the DARHI and DOUBLE DARHI are used. These two characters are not included in Bengali Block of Unicode Standard. However, there are two characters which are considered similar in appearance and are confusing with the proposed characters. They belong to DEVANAGARI Block. These are as follows:

0964 । DEVANAGARI DANDA

0965 ॥ DEVANAGARI DOUBLE DANDA

Since, DARHI and DOUBLE DARHI are part of Bengali language, it is reasonable to have these characters in Bengali Block. These characters are already included in BDS 1520:2011, the Bangladesh Standard Specification for Bangla Coded Character Set for Information Interchange. The Bengali Block has a number of reserved positions where no characters has been placed yet. Two positions, namely 09E4 and 09E5 may be allocated for DARHI and DOUBLE DARHI respectively.
