Person and Man with Swollen Belly

Emoji Submitter: Jennifer Daniel/ESC to the Unicode Technical Committee Date: March 2019 Last Updated: July 29, 2020

Background

This follows priorities set out in L2/19-101, as well as details of vendors intention to display gender inclusive emoji designs from 2019 onward, noted in L2/19-078. This document picks up where L2/19-231R leaves off with a focus on "man" and "person" with swollen belly.

ESC is recommending atomic characters to represent two new characters: (1) person with swollen belly and (2) man with swollen belly. Skin-tone modifiers are omitted from the charts.

Introduction

Let's cut to the chase. Will these emojis be useful?

One's sex does not dictate the capacity to care for children in the home or work in the market. In the same way sex equality law has aimed combat harmful sex stereotypes, there are a great deal of parallels regarding how one's sex does not dictate the capacity to cary children.

This is not a new phenomenon. Pregnancy has been indiscriminate of gender throughout history but it is only now being formally recognized. The British Medical Association's (BMA's) advises to use 'pregnant people' instead of the stereotype term 'pregnant woman'. And, although 'a large majority of people who have been pregnant or have given birth identify as women', there are intersex men and transmen who get pregnant.

Jessica Clarke, a law professor at Harvard University, suggests that, 'law could see pregnancy not as something that only happens to women's bodies, but also as a bodily condition experienced by people who do not identify as women'¹.

But this proposal goes beyond gender ... encoding people emoji with swollen bellies embraces how people repurpose emojis for entirely new uses. Finally, an emoji to denote that uncomfortable feeling after you ate too much at lunch.

The point is: this emoji isn't just about gender. This is about understanding how language is fluid and representation of a person with a swollen belly has value as an emoji expression.

4. Breaking new ground

Currently, emojis only depict people assigned female at birth in a role of pregnancy. If emojis are designed in a manner to be as inclusive as possible this emoji should present it's gender more ambiguously.

Additionally, a major gap in the emoji inventory is a manner to depict satisfaction after eating a great meal. This emoji has potential to have great utility outside of literally representing the pregnancy use case.

C. Image distinctiveness

Yes.

D. Completeness

With the passage of this emoji, we are left with seven explicitly gendered emojis as documented in $\frac{12}{19-231}$:

- Prince + Princess (no proposals at this time)
- Dancing woman + Dancing man (no proposals at this time)
- Woman in headscarf (no proposals at this time)

V. Selection factors — Exclusion

F. Overly specific

No.

G. Open-ended

No, this is not part of a set of similar items.

H. Already representable

No.

I. Logos, brands, UI icons, signage, specific people, deities

Not applicable. There are no logos, brands, signage or otherwise among the proposed characters.

J. Transient

Not applicable.

K. Faulty comparison

Justification for encoding the proposed emoji does not depend on analogy with other emoji that were encoded only for compatibility reasons.

L. Exact Images

An exact image is required.
