Summary

This document is a proposal to encode the Small Seal (Shuowen Jiezi) script, including 11,328 characters. It incorporates material from multiple prior contributions. It explains the background significance, version selection, glyph correction principles, and encoding strategies for the Small Seal script. The encoding is primarily based on the Tenghuaxie version (THX), augmented with the following additional sources: Chenchangzhi version (CCZ), Xiaoxu version (QJZ), and Duan Zhu version (DYC). Finally, some glyphs from Tenghuaxie version (THX) were modified according to the "THX Seal glyph Correction Principles" described in this document.

The accompanying code chart adopts a four-column layout, incorporating in addition to the Tenghuaxie version (THX), the Chenchangzhi version (CCZ), Xiaoxu version (QJZ), and Duan Zhu version (DYC). The document also includes a database (appended as a PDF attachment) which establishes identity of these proposed characters.

Many sections of this document are based on prior contributions, mainly:

- Proposal to encode Small Seal Script in UCS (N4688), (N5105)
- 14-Column Seal Script Glyph Comparison Chart (N5211)
- UCS Seal Script Source Mapping Data (L2/22-279)
- Converging towards a Small Seal encoding proposal (N5306)
- Revised disposition of comments on N5306 (N5317)
- Feedback to N5341 Code charts (N5346)

(Many more documents are available in https://www.unicode.org/L2/topical/seal/ which is a topical document list providing a chronologically ordered list of Seal script-related documents. Note that many documents use provisional code point values which are no longer valid; it is often easier to retrieve the relevant information by using the source reference values which are much more stable.)

An important part of this document is the Rules and Principles section which explains the general principles, unification and disunification criteria, correction principles and correspondence with modern CJK ideographs.

Completing this document is a description of the data associated with the scripts, related information necessary for the encoding, such as Unicode properties, collating, and proposal summary form, followed by the proposal summary form, the code charts, and the PDF-appended database.

A. Introduction and History

The “Small Seal Script (小篆)” resulted from the first standardization work for unifying Chinese characters of different ancient scripts by the government of Qin Dynasty (秦朝, 221 BC to 207 BC) of China. The Small Seal Script characters are known as the predecessors of modern Hanzi (漢字, i.e., Chinese characters). The first Chinese dictionary Shuowen Jiezi (說文解字), edited by Xu Shen (許慎, 58 AD to 147 AD), collected most of the Small Seal Script characters from documents of Qin Dynasty and early Han Dynasty (漢朝, 202 BC to 220 AD). This dictionary included 9,353 canonical Small Seal Script characters (Zhengzhuan (正文篆)) and 1,163 variants. In the Shuowen Jiezi book these variants were called Chongwen (重文, i.e., duplicated characters), which included Zhouwen (籀文) and Guwen (古文). The Zhouwen was the Large Seal Script (大篆) used in Zhou Dynasty (周, 1,046 BC to 256 BC) and the Guwen were the scripts used in the other six nations excluding Qin in the Warring States period (戰國時期, 475 BC to 221 BC), which were incompatible with Small Seal characters. Sometimes, the canonical Small Seal script characters are also referenced as Zhengwen (正文).

There were two types of publicly accepted scripts prevailing in Qin Dynasty, canonical Small Seal Script and Clerical Script (隸書). The canonical Small Seal Script was used by government and for official documents, and the Clerical Script was used by the public. The Clerical Script is known as Qin Li (秦隸) in philology, and it is sometimes named Gu Li (古隸) to distinguish it from subsequent Han Li (漢隸). Some people think Small Seal Script is a calligraphy typeface of modern Hanzi, which is a misunderstanding. In the book Shuowen Jiezi, the Small Seal Script is considered as a Chinese character set of a historical stage in the development of ancient Chinese characters, like Oracle Bone script (甲骨文), Bronze inscriptions (金文) and Warring States scripts (戰國文字), and it does not belong to the same system as modern Hanzi does. In addition, a large number of Small Seal Script characters cannot be mapped to modern standard Hanzi characters one to one. In addition, Small Seal Script characters have unique structures different from their counterparts in modern Hanzi. The Small Seal Script shall not be regarded as a typeface of modern Hanzi belonging to standard Hanzi script, thus it should be encoded independently in the UCS. This is in opposition to the Clerical Script which is seen as a more direct ancestor of the modern Han script which is encoded using the CJK Unified ideographs.

The Small Seal Script in the book Shuowen Jiezi plays an important role in the development of Hanzi, and gives distinctive value to the study and research of ancient characters:

1. The Small Seal Script of Qin Dynasty is the final stage of the development of ancient Hanzi characters, covering a complete structure model of pre-Qin ancient characters since Oracle bone inscriptions, and relates to the main components of the ancient Hanzi characters, and has become a required reference Chinese character set for doing textual research on and researching ancient Hanzi characters.
2. The Small Seal Script characters in Shuowen Jiezi are closely related to Zhou classic literatures of Zhou Dynasty, and the configuration of the characters can be explained by the meanings of the classic literatures; not only does it show the feature of the ideographic Chinese characters, but it also provides the method of composing modern Hanzi characters since the period of official scripts. Chinese characters are interpreted in accordance with Shuowen Jiezi in current teaching.
3. The characters are distributed in sequence according to their sub classes, under 540 main classes of radicals. The 540 radicals summarized in the book Shuowen Jiezi cover all forms and meanings of Chinese characters, and are called structural radicals with theoretical values. They are identified in the proposal by being the first element of each group using the radical as a classifier.

B. Selection of Original Materials

In Song Dynasty (宋朝, 960 AD to 1279 AD), Xu Xuan (徐鉉) was ordered by the Emperor to make a complete revision of the publication. He restored the contents and recovered its original glyphs. This version is known as “Daxu Ben (大徐本, the version of Big Xu)” while the book collated by his younger brother Xu Kai (徐鍇) is known as “Xiaoxu Ben (小徐本, the version of Little Xu)”.

Among the versions of Daxu Ben Shuowen Jiezi, three are more popular: Tenghuaxie version (THX) (額勒布藤花榭本), Pingjinguan version (PJG) (孫星衍平津館本) and Chenchangzhi version (CCZ) (陳昌治單行本). Both Tenghuaxie version and Pingjinguan version were made by following original Song Dynasty printed books, the Chenchangzhi version is a revised version of the Pingjinguan version. A notable specificity of the Daxu Ben versions compared to other versions is that they contain so-called "newly added characters (新附字)" not present in the other versions.

The Xiaoxu Ben authored by Xu Kai (徐鍇) also has multiple versions, with the Qing Dynasty Daoguang (道光) period; the Qi Junzao version (QJZ) (祁嵩藻刻本) is widely recognized as the best. Therefore, this version serves as the basis for Xiaoxu Ben encoding.

Duan Yucai (段玉裁), a leading expert in Shuowen Jiezi research in Qing Dynasty, revised Daxu Ben and Xiaoxu Ben and then corrected some glyphs according to the examples of Shuowen Jiezi itself and adjusted partial ordering of characters. His work is reflected in the book Shuowen Jiezi Zhu (說文解字注, annotations for Shuowen Jiezi, abbreviated as Duan Zhu (段注) or DYC.

The encoding proposal for Small Seal Script is therefore based on four different versions of Shuowen Jiezi, presented in a four-column layout. Two columns correspond to Daxu Ben (Tenghuaxie THX and Chenchangzhi CCZ), one column corresponds to Xiaoxu Ben (Qi Junzao QJZ), and one column corresponds to Duan Zhu (DYC).

The repertory and ordering are primarily based on the Tenghuaxie (THX) version, with the Small Seal glyphs from the other three versions arranged according to the sequence of the THX version. Three versions use a purely numeric referencing convention for their sources, while THX distinguish its ‘newly added characters’ content using a different index prefixed by ‘X’. These extensions are always added at the end of each of the appropriate 540 radical groups. While the CCZ version also contains these extensions, they are included sequentially in that referencing. Furthermore, due to the primary source reference attributed to the THX source, it also contains elements of the other sources originally not present in THX, these use indexes prefixed by ‘Y’.

C. Rules and Principles

(Note that the text of this section still presents some untranslated Chinese text, this will be updated in a revision of this document).

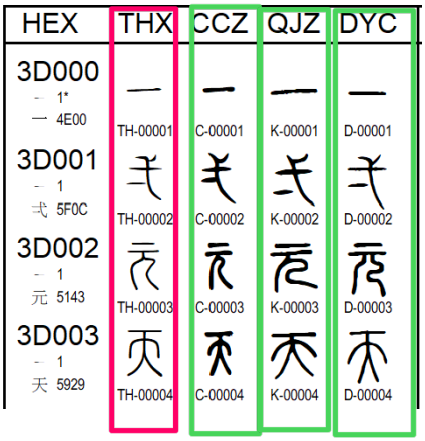

1. Mapping Principles of Small Seal Glyphs in Different Shuowen Versions

The Small Seal Script encoding proposal presents 4 versions in a 4-columns layout. The encoding follows the radical order and intra-radical character arrangement of the THX version as the primary basis. However, glyphs differ between versions, so horizontal encoding must consider whether glyphs from different versions can be unified. While document N5307 presents a more comprehensive description of these principles, this section presents a summary that uses examples drawn from the actual encoding proposal which can greatly facilitate reading.

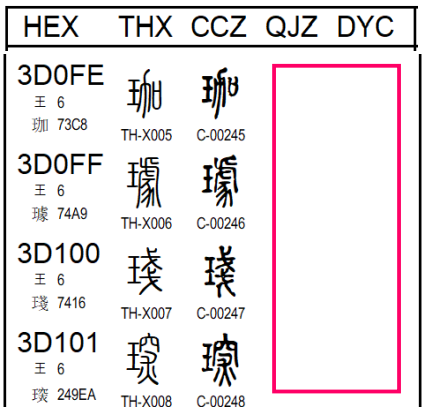

(1) General Principles:

1. Version relationships: The ordering, glyphs, and explanations of different versions of Shuowen are fundamentally consistent. The THX and CCZ versions are based on DaXu Ben, with largely identical content. The QJZ and DYC versions differ from DaXu Ben for some characters, with minor variations.

- Example: The encoding follows the radical order and intra-radical character arrangement of the THX version as the primary basis.

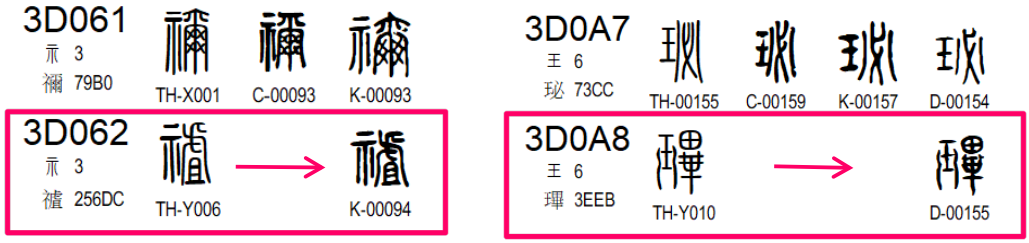

- Example: The THX and CCZ versions are based on DaXu Ben with largely identical content, while the QJZ and DYC versions do not include the "newly added characters (新附字)."

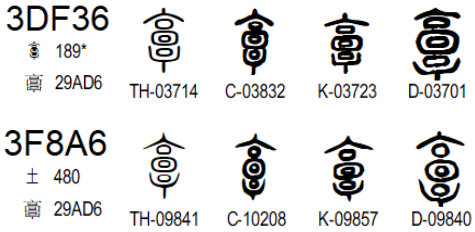

2. Coding sequence: Arranged according to the order of appearance in the THX version. Those without correspondence are typically inserted in sequential order.

- Example: The small seal character "" is attested only in the QJZ version after "" and the character "" is attested only in the DYC version after "". Therefore, the glyphs CKD-3D062 and CKD-3D0A8 have been added to the THX column respectively, serving as the encoding for ordering correspondence.

3. Written Form restrictions: Only compares characters within the same writing form (e.g., Zhengzhuan, Guwen, or Zhouwen); different forms are always processed as separate characters.

- Example: The variant set has extremely similar forms. This is the relationship between a Guwen character (U+3F8A6) and a Zhengzhuan character (U+3DF36). Guwen and Zhengzhuan characters are encoded separately to preserve the Shuowen system and are not adjusted due to similar glyph forms.

4. Code Point Consistency: Characters placed at the same code point must be consistent in both form and explanation; if conflicts exist between form and explanation, then the character is based on the form.

- Example: In case of conflict, character form takes precedence; identical glyphs share the same code point regardless of meaning.

(2) Unification Principle:

Characters meeting the following conditions are unified:

1. Taboo Glyphs
   - Example: C-00023, K-00022, D-00023 of U+38016, are all unified.

Code chart	Disunified/ Unified
3D018 示 3 禎 799B 	C, K, and D：Unified Principle 2.(1)

2. Those with incorrect seal script forms (glyphs inconsistent with explanations or lacking systematic component consistency)

   (a) The glyphs are inconsistent with the explanation：
   - Example: K-03185, in the explanation from 'K' source is, “从竹，『前』聲“ (made of bamboo, with the sound 'qián') but the glyph shows as “从竹『歬』聲“ (from the sound of bamboo 'zen').

Code chart	Disunified/ Unified
3DD03 竹 143 箭 25CED 	K：Unified Principle 2.(2a)

   (b) The glyphs lack systematic component consistency
   - Example: In Duan Zhu, the low middle component of the character "  " is consistently shown with a top horizontal stroke as in "  ", but in D-00947 as shown in the code chart it appears as "  ", missing that horizontal stroke. Therefore, D-00947 can reasonably be considered incorrect and does not need to be encoded separately.

Code chart	Disunified/ Unified
3D3EA 口 22 噦 5666 	D：Unified Principle 2.(2b)

3. Components are systematically modified in some sources
   - Example: "" in K, D sources. Examples：

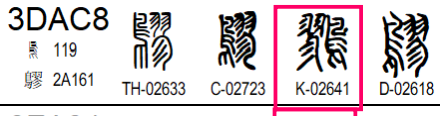

Code chart	Disunified/ Unified
3F29A 門 438* 門 9580 	K,D: Unified Principle 2.(3)
3F29B 門 438 閶 95B6 	K,D: Unified Principle 2.(3)

4. Variant characters with the same explanations but slightly different forms, like the four versions of "𢦏".

5. Phono-semantic compound structure variations (left-right or top-bottom positional interchange)

- Example:

Code chart	Disunified/ Unified
	K-02641：Unified Principle 2.(5)
	K-06461：Unified Principle 2.(5)

6. Guwen/Zhouwen Unification: When the form cannot be verified due to insufficient explanation, keep unified encoding rather than encoding a separate code point.

- Example:

Code chart	Disunified/ Unified
	C-01600：Unified
	C-07913：Unified

(3) Disunification Principle:

Characters meeting the following conditions are encoded separately:

1. Same pronunciation and meaning, but with differences in components, e.g., " 𪚥 , 𪚦 ".

- Example

Code chart	3D2A5 艸 12 藍 26F90 TH-00644 C-00662 K-00643 3D2A6 艸 12 藍 862B TH-Y017 D-00640		D-00640: Disunified Principle 3.(1)

Duan Yucai: In all editions the Seal form is written as 藍, and the explanation is mistakenly given as having 監 as the phonetic. Here it is corrected in accordance with Guangyun and Jiyun. Note: https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Guangyun https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Jiyun https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Fanqie Duan divided Old Chinese words into 17 rhyme groups.

2. Compound characters with the same components and the same number of components, but with different structures.

- Example:

3. Single characters with the same pronunciation and meaning, but with differences in stroke count or stroke relationship (intersecting, connecting, or separate).

- Example:

2. THX Seal glyph Correction Principles

Characters sourced from the THX version should have shapes consistent with their original references in the THX version. However, during the study of the Tenghuaxie Small Seal Script, scholars discovered issues with some character glyphs. To ensure systematicity and consistency of the THX Small Seal Script characters, some corrections have been made, organized in six correction principles can be summarized. For complete explanations, please refer to N5189.

A. Taboo glyphs: Some glyphs seen as forbidden (such as those related to imperial names) appear in two ways: changed characters or omitting the strokes. For changed characters, they are restored by checking other versions; for characters with stroke omission, they are restored to their complete original forms.

- Example:「琰」

Emperor Jiaqing's（嘉慶）original personal name was "永琰" (Yong Yan*) and later his name was changed to "顒琰" (still Yong Yan but with the character for "Yong" changed from the more common "永" to the less common "顒", as a result, the seal glyph (琰) of the character "琰" was written omitting strokes to express taboo.*

Serial No. in THX version (code point)	Original Glyph	TTF Font	Corresp. Modern Char.	Refer to the other version
00140 (U+3D098)			琰

B. Exact duplicate: Shuowen Jiezi contains characters with identical forms (and similar meanings).

(a) When such duplicate characters are all Zhengzhuan, only the first character in sequence is encoded.

- Example: ""

The glyphs and meanings of the two "" characters are very similar. TH00939 () is in volume 2, TH-02078 () is in volume 3, and TH-00939 is ranked first, so only TH-00939 is encoded.

Serial No. in THX version (code point)	Original Glyph	TTF Font	Corresp. Modern Char.	SW Radical	pronunciation	meaning
00939 (U+3D3DD			右	口,又	you4	It means to assist. From 口 (mouth) and 又 (hand).
02078 (N/A)			右	又	you4	It means assistance by hand and mouth. From 又 (hand) and 口 (mouth).

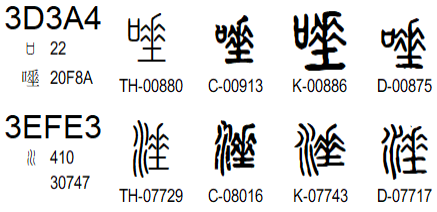

(b) When a group consists of Zhengzhuan and Chongwen with identical forms, only the Zhengzhuan entry is encoded, while the Chongwen entry is not.

- Example: "唾， 㶉"

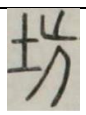

TH-00881 is a Chongwen/Variant of TH-00880 with an identical glyph form to TH-07729; although the meanings differ, only TH-07729 will be encoded as it is Zhengzhuan.

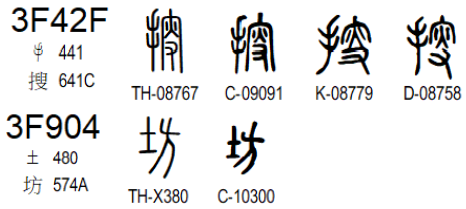

THX Serial No.	Vol.	Original Glyph	TTF Font	Corresp Modern Char.	SW Radical	Alt. Radical	type	meaning	Note
00880	2			唾	口		Zhengzhuan	It means saliva. From 口 (mouth), with 垂 as the phonetic component.	Encoded
00881	2			唾	口	水	Chongwen	唾, alternatively written with the 水 (water) component as 湻.	Not encoded
07729	11			湻	水		Zhengzhuan	It refers to a ferry crossing located west of the Xihe region. From 水 (water), with 垂 as the phonetic component.	Encoded

C. Original broken glyphs: Due to rubbing or other conditions, some glyphs in the original book appear broken or incomplete. These glyphs are corrected based on the character's meaning and references from other versions, with the corrected glyphs used to avoid confusion.

- Example:

THX Serial No.	Original Glyph	Meaning/ Note	THX Glyph Font
08767		The shape in the bottom right is incomplete.	 TH-08767
x380		The shape in the bottom right should not be separated.	 TH-X380

D. Inconsistent component: Some glyphs contain inconsistent components. These inconsistencies are restored to original forms through comparison and etymological analysis according to the character's meaning.

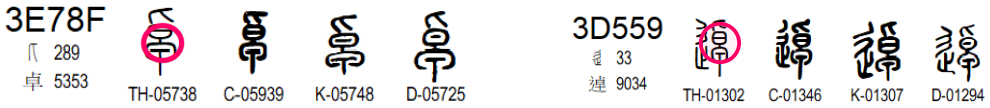

- Example: components "  " and "  "

 : There is a short vertical stroke in the middle of the glyph joining the two components,

 : No vertical stroke in same location.

There are 11 characters that have glyphs related to the component "", but only characters corresponding to "  " and "" had different seal glyphs (missing the middle vertical stroke), so they have been modified for consistency.

Serial No. in Tenghuaxie version	Original Glyph	TTF Font	Corresp Modern Char.	SW Radical	Type
05738			卓	匕	Zhengzhuan
01302			逴	辵	Zhengzhuan
01101			趠	走	Zhengzhuan
05332			罩	网	Zhengzhuan
05538			倬	人	Zhengzhuan
07086			焯	火	Zhengzhuan
07567			悼	心	Zhengzhuan

08321			鯞	魚	Zhengzhuan
08617			掉	手	Zhengzhuan
09015			婥	女	Zhengzhuan

E. Possible duplicate: Even glyphs that have only subtle differences are worth keeping and are encoded separately to maintain the integrity of the Small Seal script system.

- Example: TH-06703:  -> 影

Due to Xu Shen(許慎) clearly stating that Guwen and Zhouwen should not be unified, there are two similar THX entries, TH-06702 is Guwen, and the entry TH-06703 is Zhouwen. To accentuate the glyphic difference, TH-06703 was replaced with the DYC version.

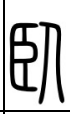

THX Serial No.	Original Glyph	TTF Font	Corresp Modern Char.	SW Radical	Type	Note
06701			馬	馬	Zhengzhuan
06702			影	馬	Guwen
06703			影	馬	Zhouwen	WG2# N5089

F. Misprint of the original book: Some Small Seal script forms in Shuowen Jiezi are inconsistent with their explanations. By comparing with other sources, such as DaXu Ben, when confirmed as errors in the THX version, these incorrect forms are modified to align with their meanings.

- Example:

THX Serial No.	Original Glyph	TTF Font	Corresp Modern Char.	SW Radical	Type	Content
00632			茨	艸	Zhengzhuan	From 艸 (“grass”), with 次 as the phonetic component.
05767			臥	卧	Zhengzhuan	Misprint of the original book: “from 人 and 臣, taking the sense of ‘to prostrate’”.
07082			熄,焄	火	Zhengzhuan	Misprint of the original book: “from 火, with 皂 as the phonetic component”; the glyph is corrected according to CCZ.

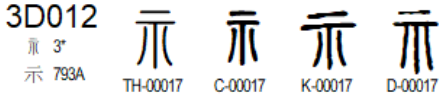

3. Correspondence to the modern CJK characters Principle

A. For Zhengzhuan characters that have a match in both form and meaning with a modern CJK unified ideograph, that CJK ideograph should be associated with the Zhenzhuan characters.

- Example, " 示 ".

THX Serial No.	TTF	Corresp. Modern Char.	SW Radical	Type
00017		示	示	Zhengzhuan

B. For Zhengzhuan characters that do not have a perfect match (in both form and meaning) with a modern CJK unified ideograph, the corresponding modern CJK character should be selected based on semantic equivalence.

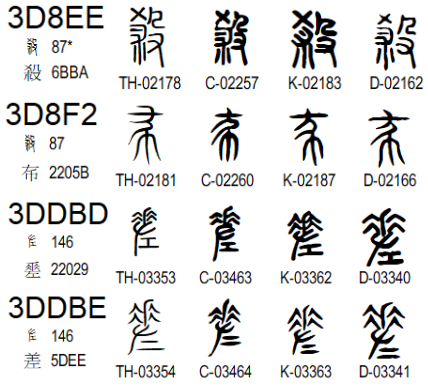

- Example, "  "

THX Serial No.	TTF	Corresp Modern Char.	SW Radical	Type
00070		禳	示	Zhengzhuan

C. For variants (Guwen or Zhouwen), if there is no corresponding match with a modern CJK unified ideographs, use the modern CJK character associated with the corresponding Zhengzhuan character instead.

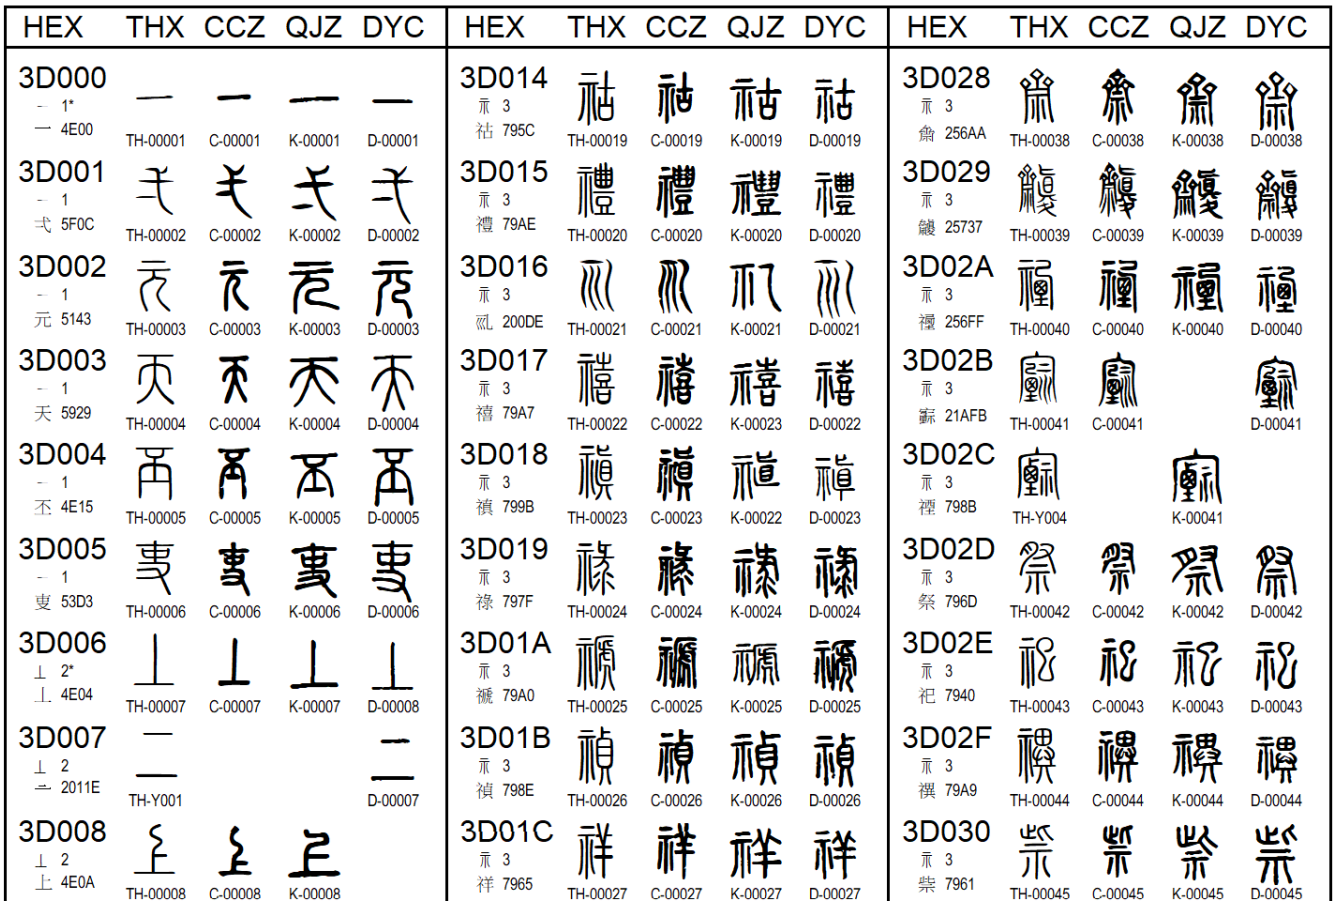

THX Serial No.	TTF	Corresp Modern Char.	SW Radical	Type
02178		殺	殺	Zhengzhuan
02181		殺	殺	Guwen Variant
03353		差	左	Zhengzhuan
03354		差	左	Zhouwen Variant

D. Presentation of the repertoire

On this repertoire, the four-column layout presents four sources: THX, CCZ, QJZ and DYC; the column showing the THX source is used a primary reference representing all sources, not just the original THX entries, but also the 237 supplemental glyphs (not original part of THX but at least present in another source).

The repertoire is presented in a four-columns fixed layout. Using such a layout is preferred because all the sources include most of the repertoire. At this moment, there is only a production font for the THX source glyphs including all the 237 supplemental glyphs. For the other three sources: CCZ, QJZ and DYC, the proposal uses fonts that represent the raw content of these sources without 'beautification'. Example follows:

In a layout similar to what is done for the CJK Unified repertoire, the source information is provided below each glyph. In addition, the code chart shows the radical codes (1 to 540) with their visual representation in Small Seal glyph version and the modern CJK ideograph code point and glyph associated with a given Small Sea code point. The radical values can be multiple. The code points corresponding to radical entries are identified by having a '*' near their radical number and are always the first code point in their group. In the fragment above, U+3D000 is the entry for radical #1, and U+3D006 is the entry for radical #2.

A peculiarity of the THX source column is that, in addition to its standard index values, it uses the syntax 'TH-Yddd' ('ddd' representing an index from 001 to 237) to indicate that the entry originally came from CCZ, QJZ or DYC sources and does not exist as an original THX source index. That syntax may be modified before final adoption. The fragment above shows examples for U+3D007 and U+3D02C. The syntax of these values in described in the next section

E. Small Seal Database

For each proposed code point, the database contains source references for up to 4 sources (THX, CCZ, QJZ, and DYC), one or more modern characters, and one or two radical numbers (1 to 540). This has led to the definition of the following records for each code point (one source minimum, all code points have at least one modern representation and one radical):

- kSEAL_THXSrc corresponding to the THX source takes values in the form TH-ddddd , TH-Xddd, or TH-Yddd,
- kSEAL_CCZSrc corresponding to the CCZsource takes values in the form C-ddddd,
- kSEAL_DYCSrc corresponding to the DYC source takes values in the form D-ddddd,
- kSEAL_QJZSrc corresponding to the DYC source takes values in the form K-ddddd,
- kSEAL_MCJK corresponding to the modern CJK equivalent in hexadecimal format,
- kSEAL_Rad radical made of the number followed by a dot and its encoded value. As such, a code point corresponding to the radical entry is detected by the fact that its code point is the same as its radical value. It is also the first member of its group. In some rare cases, there may be two radical values separated by a space character.

The next iteration of the draft for Unicode Standard UAX#60 'Data for Non Han Ideographic Scripts' should add these information described above in a format suitable to that UAX.

Additional data is typically available for each code point in the research material, such as the modern form of the radical and an alternate form of the radical in modern form. The modern form of the radical can be deducted from the existing database (it is simply the modern form of the radical entry) and therefore does not need to be added separately. However, in the research material, the alternate forms (common) are not synchronized with the existence of multiple radicals (rare) for a given code point. To avoid inconsistency, these alternate modern radicals are not part of the database. Ideally, they should all correspond to multiple radical entries.

Like other ideographic scripts, the sources determine identity and thus are normative properties. The rest of the data elements may be informative or provisional. In particular, the modern CJK equivalent is still a work in progress and will be updated in the future.

It is likely that other data will be added to the database in the future. A good candidate is the Showen Jenzi type such as Zhengzhuan, Zhouwen, and Guwen.

F. Technical Details

1. Block Allocation

It is suggested to encode the 11,328 Small Seal characters in a block named ‘Small Seal’ (or just ‘Seal’) occupying the range 3D000..3FC3F (11,328 code points, block fully occupied). This is different from the provisional range of 38000..3AC4F (11,344 code points) given in the Roadmap to the TIP. This repertoire is being moved to give more space for new CJK Unified Ideographs blocks.

2. Character Names

The set of Small Seal characters proposed in this document should use algorithmic character names based on code points, i.e. SEAL CHARACTER-3D000 through SEAL CHARACTER-3FC3F

3. Character Properties

All Small Seal characters should have the following Unicode properties:

Script = Seal
General Category = Lo [Letter, Other]
Canonical Combining Class = 0
Bidi Class = L [Left-to-Right]
Line Break = ID [Ideographic]
East Asian Width = W [Wide]
Ideographic = Y
Indic_Syllabic_Category = Other
Indic_Positional_Category = Not_Applicable

While the script is commonly named ‘Small Seal’, the script property and the character names use the term ‘Seal’ in alignment with ISO15924. Sometimes the term ‘Large Seal’ is used in contrast to Small Seal, but ‘Large Seal’ tends to refer to a broad range of forms without a clear definition and likely would not be encoded as a single script. Therefore, it is acceptable to formally name the script ‘Seal’ because it reflects the overall main usage. For now the code chart uses ‘Small Seal’ as header, however these headers do not reflect necessarily the normative block name.

Giving Small Seal characters the Ideographic property would allow for potential registrations of ideographic variation sequences for Small Seal characters in the Ideographic Variation Database (see Unicode Technical Standard #37).

Small Seal is not an Indic script; therefore, it uses the default value for all code points for both Indic_Syllabic_Category and and Indic_Positional_Category.

4. Collation

Because Small Seal characters are encoded using the radical group order, they can be collated using their encoded code point order, first element being U+3D000, and the last element being U+3FC3F.

5. Confusability

The simple forms among Small Seal characters can be confused with the equivalent forms in CJK ideogrpahs (ex U+3D000 𗦟, U+3D006 𗦠, U+3D007 𗦡, U+3D00F 𗦢, U+3D010 𗦣, etc.. However, because Small Seal is a historic script, it would not qualify for use in identifier which only use ‘modern use’ scripts. Most of the glyphs are not confusable with CJK ideographs or any other script elements currently encoded.

G. Development History and Acknowledgements

This document was made possible by building on considerable efforts by experts from China, TCA, Japan, and the USA. The work started in November 2003 with a first contribution from China calling for an encoding of China's Old Hanzi (document WG2/IRGN999 also L2/03-450) which included a Small Seal mention. The initial encoding proposal was presented in October 2015 as a joint contribution from TCA and China (N4688) and revised in June 2019 (N5105). While it mentioned the various versions of Shuowen Jiezi it focused on the Tenghuaxie (THX) derived from Daxu Ben and the repertoire only covered that version.

New contributions from Richard Cook (especially L2/22-279) and SUZUKI Toshiya (especially N5211) made possible to develop a multi-source encoding proposal, encompassing many more sources, incorporating most major versions created during the long history of the script. The first draft of such multi-source encoding appeared in N5306. Various issues were addressed in N5294, N5343, and N5346. TCA and China created a new preamble for multi-source encoding proposal in N5318 which has been incorporated in this document along with another contribution concerning encoding principles (N5307).

> Note: The first version of this document did not incorporate the feedback from N5346. The revision resulted in the suppression of 11 code points (from 11,339 to 11,328), and update of 3,121 entries for modern CJK values. In addition to N5346, two additional changes were done (disunification of the K and D sources in {TH-01650, C-01715, K-01653, D-01636}, covered by N5343) and removal of one modern CJK value for the set {TH-02670, C-02760, K-02678, D-02655} (because it was the last remaining entry with more than one modern value).

Special mention should also be made for Lin Mei WEI (Selena) from TCA for providing fonts and index data files created by TCA and China experts and in general coordinating the efforts leading to this encoding proposal. Additional fonts for the other sources were provided by SUZUKI Toshiya from Japan (CCZ font), and Kushim JIANG (QJZ and DYC). These experts also contributed to the analysis of the data set and providing feedback concerning unification and disunification issues. A full list of the contributing experts and organizations is appended.

The editorship of this project was made possible in part by a grant from the Mellon Foundation under the Public Knowledge program to the Script Encoding Initiative at the University of California, Berkeley.
